These were derived from expressed sequence tags (ESTS) from the organism of interest. They can be used in diagnostics, forensics, gene mapping, identification of mutations, to assess biodiversity and for nutritional purposes. The present sequence is a protein of the invention.

CC The invention relates to a human tribonectin which is a product of CC alternative splicing of the human MSF (megakaryocyte stimulating factor) CC gene. The tribonectin has at least one O-linked oligosaccharide CC lubricating molety and has a polypeptide sequence comprising 1-76 CC repeats of a motif having at least 50% identity to the sequence KEPAPTT CC (AAB29774). The invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding a CC human MSF-derived tribonectin; a biocompatible composition comprising a CC human MSF-derived tribonectin; a biocompatible composition and a method CC measuring the amount of MSF or its fragment in a biological sample of a CC measuring the amount of MSF or its fragment in a biological sample of a CC indicates the presence of or predisposition to developing CC indicates the presence of or predisposition to developing costeoarthritis. The tribonectin and DNA encoding it are useful in the treatment of osteoarthritis, where they may be used for lubricating

The tribonectin, when formulated as a membrane, foam, gel or fibre, is useful for inhibiting adhesion between two surfaces such as the injured tissues of a mammal, where the injury is caused by a surgical insertion or trauma, or an artificial device e.g., an orthopaedic implant. In particular, one of the surfaces is pericardial tissue. DNA encoding a tribonectin may be used in gene therapy. The present sequence represents

CC The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic. The composition of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous conjection. The human CACP protein is identified in the invention as composition the human CACP protein is identified in the invention as composition of the protein (MSF). The gene encoding composition of this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-cc arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial the protein (MSF) of the perilasia without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSF) composition may be composed to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis. The composition may be composent human megaharyovyte stimulating factor (MSF, CACP protein). The sequence is not given in its entirety in figure 4 of the composition and therefore cheating factor (MSF, CACP protein).

The sequence covered by exons II, CC sequence is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding CC asceretory leader, an initiating methionine proceeding exon II and a cc terminating codon following exon IV. The cDNA sequence given contains CC (meg-CSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a cc classical mammalian protein secretion signal sequence. The sequence CC encoding the original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to compliant to the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The CC primary transcript of this gene may be cleaved in different ways to CC vand VI are thought to be related to the activity of the factor and CC are also implicated in the stability folding and processing of the collecule. These exons are also thought to play a role in the observed CC implicated in the processing or folding of the appropriate structure of the resulting factor, ie. one or more of these exons may contain CC implicated in the processing or folding of the appropriate structure of the cellular matrix or extracellular matrix processing. Both naturally cocuring and non-naturally occuring MSF's may be characterised by with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different cc with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different cc members of the MSF family.

RESA and FIRA have antigenicity suitable for providing protective immunity against Plasmodium falciparum malarial infections.

                         This novel 55 kDa protein is encoded by an open reading frame of a Mycobacterium tuberulosis DNA fragment (see AAT93610) containing polymorphic GC-rich sequences. Its amino acid sequence shows a high proline content, but there is no homology to any known proline-rich antigens of mycobacteria. Novel M. tuberculosis proteins (see AAM31851-57) are claimed. These can be produced as recombinant proteins, especially in bacterial, yeast, fungal or higher eukaryote host cells, and used for diagnosing tuberculosis and other mycobacterial infections in humans or animals. The claimed proteins can also be used for epidemiological studies, for

The present sequence is obtained from a clustral x alignment with protein 608. Protein 608 was identified using the method of the inventic after subjecting rat osteoblasts to mechanical stress. Expression of the 608 gene was found to be upregulated by about 3-fold in cells subjected to mechanical strain. The specification describes a method for the identification of genes responsive to a specific mechanical stress. The method comprises applying the mechanical stress to an organism (tissue genes are employed in determining risk associated with a physiological or disease state. The risk determination methods are used for testing a medicament for gene therapy. These medicaments, or genes identified by the method of the invention, are used for treating, preventing or controlling a physiological or disease state (especially osteoporosis or bone density or other factors causing or contributing to osteoporosis or its symptoms or other conditions involved in mechanical stress or its lack. The methods can also be used for advancing research or studies in bone development. or cells comprising bone cells), isolating the specific cellular fractions and extracting mRNA from them, and differentially analysing mRNA in comparison with control samples. The method is used to identify genes whose expression is responsive to a specific stress. The identify bone development. to identify the

Its amino acid sequence shows a high proline content, but there is no homology to any known a proline rich antigens of mycobacteria. Novel M. tuberculosis proteins (see AAW31851-57) are claimed. These can be produced as recombinant proteins, especially in bacterial, yeast, fungal or higher eukaryote host cells, and used for diagnosing tuberculosis

The present invention relates to novel single exon nucleic acid probes (see AAI00010-AAI10067). The present sequence is a peptide encoded by one such probe. The probes are useful for measuring human gene expression in a human breast sample, where the probe hybridises at high stringency to a nucleic acid expressed in the human breast. The probes are useful for predicting, diagnosing, grading, stagling, monitoring and prognosing diseases of the human breast particularly those diseases with polygenic aetiology. The diseases include: breast cancer, disorders of development, inflammatory diseases of the breast fibrocystic changes, proliferative breast disease and non-carcinoma tumours.

cc respectively. An example of such a complex is the cellulose degrading cc protein complex from Clostridium thermocellum, known as the cellulosome. Cc This complex comprises around 15 proteins including endoglucanases, cc ellubohydratases, hemicellulases, e.g. xylanases or lichinases, which cc interact with a central "scaffold" protein designated the cellulosome cc integrating protein (CipA; see AAW43108). The catalytic subunits compared to the cyrating protein (CipA; see AAW43108). The catalytic subunits compared to a protein invention relates to the isolation of proteins binding to a novel compared domain is designated a type II dockerin domain found on the catalytic subunits of the cype II dockerin found on the catalytic subunits of the cype II dockerin type compared to the type II dockerin domain found in the Creminal portion of Cip. The new compared to the catalytic subunits of the cellulosome). The type II dockerin domain for a protein which binds the novel type II dockerin domain and is the product of the OlpB gene. The protein contains 4 type II cohesin domains in the N-terminal portion of CipA. The nowel type II dockerin domain and is the product of the olpB gene. The protein contains 4 type II cohesin domains in the N-terminal portion of CipA. The novel type II dockerin domain and is the product of the olpB gene. Anti-(I) antibodies and antagonists may also be used to down regulate TCAP expression and activity. The anti-(I) antibodies may also be used as diagnostic agents for detecting the presence of TCAPs in samples (e.g. by enzyme linked immunosorbant assay (ELISA)). AAI28460 to AAI295 and AAM24494 to AAM24523 represent nucleotide and amino acid sequences given in the exemplification of the present invention.

cc coxa vara-pericarditis (CACP) protein, or portions of the CACP protein.

CC The composition may further comprise a local namesthetic. The composition
cC of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous cc injection. The human CACP protein is identified in the invention as cc being megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). The gene encoding cc CACP protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 1q25-31, and mutations in cc this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-cc arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have symovial cc hyperplasia without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSF)
cc acts as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and cc joints in the treatment of osteoarthritis. The composition may be cc applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, cc loss of range of movement or joint damage). The present sequence cc represents the bovine orthologue of human MSF, superficial zone the polynucleotides (II) that encode them. (I) have cytostatic activity. (I) and (II) can be used in gene therapy and vaccine production. (I) and (II) may be used in the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of diseases associated with inappropriate colon tumour associated protein (TCAP). Cc expression, such as colonic cancer. For example, (I) and (II) may be used to treat disorders associated with decreased expression by cc rectifying mutations or deletions in a patient's genome that affect the Cc patients own production of them. Additionally, (II) may be used to produce the TCAP proteins, by inserting the nucleic acids into a host cc cell culturing the cell to express the protein. (II) and its complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in detect and the presence of similar nucleic acids in samples, and therefore which patients may be in need of restorative therapy. (I) may also be used as antigens in the production of antibodies against TCAPs

This sequence was purified using a carrier which can couple wheat germ cargulutinin and heparin to separate MPO. Fragments of this sequence (see CARR80039 and AAR80040) were used to produce the amplification primers can then be used as probes to screen human cDNA libraries for MPO cDNA. The fragments amplified by these primers can then be used as produce MPO. The MPO cDNA can then be inserted into a plasmid which is used to transform cells to produce MPO. The MPO sequence is capable of promoting colony formation of megakaryocytes, enlarging the size of megakaryocytes and stimulating the proliferation of multipotential stem cells. The care factor may be used for treating thrombocytopenia and hematocytopenia. The purification method can be used to isolate MPO from human urine or serums of patients with aplastic anaemia, and from animal blood or urine by radiation exposing the animals to induce aplastic anaemia.

The invention relates to a human tribonectin which is a product of CC alternative splicing of the human MSF (megakaryocyte stimulating factor) CC gene. The tribonectin has at least one O-linked ollyosaccharide CC lubricating molety and has a polypeptide sequence comprising 1-76 CC repeats of a motif having at least 50% identity to the sequence KEPAPTT CC (AAB29774). The invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding a human tribonectin for inhibiting tissue adhesion formation; and a method CC of diagnosing osteoarthritis or a predisposition to osteoarthritis by measuring the amount of MSF or its fragment in a biological sample of a CC mammal, wherein an increased amount of MSF compared to a control CC indicates the presence of or predisposition to developing osteoarthritis. The tribonectin and DNA encoding it are useful in the treatment of osteoarthritis, where they may be used for lubricating CC mammalian joints, such as articulating joints of humans, dogs or horses. The tribonectin, when formulated as a membrane, foam, gel or fibre, is useful for inhibiting adhesion between two surfaces such as the injured cor trauma, or an artificial device e.g., an orthopaedic implant. In CC particular, one of the surfaces is pericardial tissue. DNA encoding a tribonectin may be used in gene therapy. The present sequence represents a substantial portion of a human MSF-derived tribonectin.

These were derived from expressed sequence tags from the organism of interest. They can be used in diagnostics, forensics, gene mapping, identification of mutations, to assess blodiversity and for nutritional purposes. The present sequence is protein of the invention.

The invention relates to a human tribonectin which is a product of alternative splicing of the human MSF (megakaryocyte stimulating f gene. The tribonectin has at least one O-linked oligosaccharide lubricating molety and has a polypeptide sequence comprising 1-76 repeats of a motif having at least 50% identity to the sequence KF (AAB29774). The invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding thuman MSF-derived tribonectin; a biocompatible composition comprising a CC human tribonectin for inhibiting tissue adhesion formation; and a method CC of diagnosing osteoarthritis or a predisposition to osteoarthritis by CC measuring the amount of MSF or its fragment in a biological sample of a CC indicates the presence of or predisposition to developing cC indicates the presence of or predisposition to developing CC osteoarthritis. The tribonectin and DNA encoding it are useful in the CC treatment of osteoarthritis, where they may be used for lubricating CC mammalian joints, such as articulating joints of humans, dogs or horses. The tribonectin, when formulated as a membrane, foam, gel or fibre, is CC useful for inhibiting adhesion between two surfaces such as the injured CC tissues of a mammal, where the injury is caused by a surgical insertion CC or trauma, or an artificial device e.g., an orthopaedic implant. In CC particular, one of the surfaces is pericardial tissue. DNA encoding a tribonectin may be used in gene therapy. The present sequence represents

                                                     The invention relates to a method of treating osteoarthritis via the cadministration of a composition comprising the camptodactyly-arthropathy-cc coxa vara-pericarditis (CACP) protein, or portions of the CACP protein. The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic. The composition of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous conjection. The human CACP protein is identified in the invention as the being megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). The gene encoding cc CACP protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 1q25-31, and mutations in this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-cc arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial cc hyperplasia without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSF) cats as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and conjunts in the treatment of osteoarthritis. The composition may be composed to the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, cc loss of range of movement or joint damage). The present sequence cc represents human megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF, CACP protein). CC sequence was therefore obtained from GenBank (U70316).

The sequence covered by exons II, III and IV encodes megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). This occursor is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding the asceretory leader, an initiating methionine proceeding exon II and a consist of the membrane colony stimulating factor (MSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a consist of the criginal megration signal sequence. The sequence classical mammalian protein secretion signal sequence. The sequence concoding the original megration between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The concoding the original megration of cleaved in different ways to concoding the inthe processing and processing of the molecule. These exons are also thought to be related to the activity of the factor and considered in the stability, folding and processing of the concoding of interest protein. Exons vially a role in the observed considered in the processing or folding of the appropriate structure of the resulting factor, ie one or more of these exons may contain concoding and processing. Both naturally occuring and non-naturally occuring wsf's may be characterised by contain sequence, and to the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different and sequence, and exons of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, combinations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, and exons of the membrane in different to form different and the exons spliced together in different of the contains the sequence, and the sequence is a full of the sequence of the exons of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, and the sequence of the seque

No. is the number of results predicted by chance to have a score greater than or equal to the score of the result being printed,
and is derived by analysis of the total score distribution.

                                              injection. The human CACP protein is identified in the invention as being megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). The gene encoding CACP protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 1q25-31, and mutations in this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial hyperplasia without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSF) acts as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and joints in the treatment of osteoarthritis. The composition may be applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, loss of range of movement or joint damage). The present sequence represents human megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF, CACP protein). Note: This sequence is not given in its entirety in figure 4 of the specification, although a GenBank accession number was given. This

The sequence given is a full length translation from the megakaryocyte contribution of the megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF) precursor. The sequence covered by exons II, contributed in the megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). This contributed is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding content of the form human megakaryocyte colony stimulating factor (msg. CSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a colassical mammalian protein sedvention signal sequence. The sequence conding the original meg-cSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to terminate in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The contributed in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The contributed in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The contributed in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The contributed in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The contributed in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The contributed in the region between amy be cleaved in different ways to contribute of this gene may be cleaved in different ways to contribute of the stability, folding and processing of the contributed in the stability, folding and processing of the contributed in the processing or folding to play a role in the observed contributed in the processing or folding of the appropriate structure of the resulting factor, ie. one or more of these exons may contain contributed processing or folding of the appropriate structure of the cellular matrix or extracellular matrix processing. Both naturally coccuring MSF s may be characterised by various combinations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different axis.

Pred. No. is the number of results predicted by chance to have a score greater than or equal to the score of the result being printed, and is derived by analysis of the total score distribution.

The sequence covered by exons II., CC III.and IV encodes megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). This CC sequence is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding a secretory leader, an initiating methionine proceeding exon II and a C terminating codon following exon IV. The CDNA sequence given contains, CC sequences derived from human megakaryocyte colony stimulating factor (Meg-CSF): Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a C classical mammalian protein secretion signal sequence. The sequence cc encoding the original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to terminate in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The CC yield a family of mRNA's each encoding a different MSF protein. Exons CC yield a family of mRNA's each encoding a different MSF protein. Exons CC yield a family of mRNA's each encoding a different MSF protein. Exons CC yield a family of the stability, folding and processing of the CC molecule. These exons are also thought to play a role in the observed CC synergy of MSF with other cytokines. Exons V - XII are believed to be resulting factor, ie. one or more of these exons may contain CC sequences which direct proteolytic cleavage, adhesion, organisation of the cellular matrix or extracellular matrix processing. Both naturally CC various combinations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different XX members of the MSF family.

                             CC administration of a composition comprising the camptodactyly arthropathy-
CC coxh vara-pericarditis (CACP) protein, or portions of the CACP protein.
CC The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic. The composition
CC of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous CC injection. The human CACP protein is identified in the invention as
CC being megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). The gene encoding
CC CACP protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 1925-31, and mutations in CC this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-
CC arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial
CC hyperplasia without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSF)
CC cts as synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and CC joints in the treatment of osteoarthritis. The composition may be CC applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, CC loss of range of movement or joint damage). The present sequence
CC represents human megakaryocyte stimulating fatory (MSF, CACP protein).
CC represents human megakaryocyte stimulating fatory (MSF, CACP protein).
CC sequence is not given in its entirety in figure 4 of the CC specification, although a GenBank accession number was given. This CC sequence was therefore obtained from GenBank (UV)316).

No. is the number of results predicted by chance to have a score greater than or equal to the score of the result being printed,
and is derived by analysis of the total score distribution.

The sequence covered by exons II, CC ILI and IV encodes megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). This CC sequence is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding CC a secretory leader, an initiating methionine proceeding exon II and a C terminating codon following exon IV. The cDNA sequence given contains Sequences derived from human megakaryocyte colony stimulating factor (Meg-CSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a CC classical mammalian protein secretion signal sequence. The sequence chooling the original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to complete the region between amino acid residues 114 - 147. The CC primary transcript of this gene may be cleaved in different ways to CC wand VI are thought to be related to the activity of the factor and CC molecule. These exons are also thought to play a role in the observed CC implicated in the stability, folding and processing of the resulting factor, ie. one or more of these exons may contain CC the resulting factor, ie. one or more of these exons may contain Sequences which direct proteolytic cleavage, adhesion, organisation of the cellular matrix or extracellular matrix processing. Both naturally CC various combinations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different XX

                                        The invention relates to a method of treating osteoarthritis via the administration of a composition comprising the camptodactyly-arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis (CACP) protein, or portions of the CACP protein.

The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic. The composition of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous in lection. The human CACP protein is identified in the invention as being megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSE). The gene encoding CACP protein (MSE) is located on chromosome 1925-31, and mutations in this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-carthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial hyperplasia without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSE) acts as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and complied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis. The composition may be applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, class of range of movement or joint damage. The present sequence constitution and complete in the treatment of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint, pain, class of range of movement or joint damage. The present sequence constitution in the composition may be applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint, pain, class of range of movement or joint damage. The present sequence constitution in the present sequence constitution in the sequence of the sequence was therefore obtained from GenBank (UT)316).

The sequence covered by exons II, cili and IV encodes megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). This contains the initiating methionine proceeding exon II and a terminating codon following exon IV. The cDNA sequence given contains terminating codon following exon IV. The cDNA sequence given contains sequences derived from human megakaryocyte colony stimulating factor (meg-CSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a classical mammalian protein secretion signal sequence. The sequence encoding the original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to terminate in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The pylimary transcript of this gene may be cleaved in different ways to yield a family of mRNA's each encoding a different MSF protein. Exons V and VI are thought to be related to the activity of the factor and are also implicated in the stability, folding and processing of the implicated in the processing or folding of the appropriate structure of the resulting factor, ie. one or more of these exons may contain concurring and non-naturally occurring MSF's may be characterised by curious combinations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different and the sequence, with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different and the sequence, with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different and the sequence.

                                   protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 1925-31, and mutations in gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-propathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and place to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis. The composition may be soft range of movement or joint damage). The present sequence is not given in its entirety in figure 4 of the efficient of the symptoms of osteoarthritis (MSF, CACP protein).

NPW human mega-karyocyte stimulating factors - for treating fumume deficiencies, cancer, exposure to radiation or drugs, bacterial and viral infections, etc. CLAIM 1, 2 and 3; Fig 1; 87pp; English. The sequence given is a full length translation from the megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF) precursor. The sequence covered by exons II, sequence is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence and intitating methionine proceeding exon I and a terminating codon following exon IV. The cDNA sequence given contains the intitating methionine, and encodes a sequencing the original meg-CSF includes exons II I'V and is thought to this gene may be cleaved in different ways to yeld a family of mRNA's each encoding a different MSF protein. Exons V and VI are thought to be related to the activity of the factor and a sequence with other yelds in the stability, folding and processing of the squences of MSF with other cytokines. Exons V - XII are believed to be the resulting factor, as one on more of these propopriate structure of sequences which direct proteolyric cleavege, adhesion, organisation of counting and non-raturally cocuring way sequences. The invention relates to a method of treating osteoarthritis via the campinatorial content of a composition combrising the campinatory of arthropathy-cox avara-pericarditis (CACP) protein, or portions of the CACP protein. The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic. The composition of the invention may be administered to a intra-articular or intravenous the injection. The human CACP protein is identified in the invention as being megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). The gene encoding this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder campiodactyly-car thropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial hyperplasia without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSF) and mutations in the sas a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and joints in the treatment of osteoarthritis. The composition may be applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, caprisents human, megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF, CACP protein). Whise sequence is not given in its entirety in figure 4 of the specification, although a denama can and through a sequence was therefore other and from Company (1770746).

The sequence covered by exons II, considered by the addition of an N-terminal sequence in codified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding terminating codon following exon IV. The cDNA sequence given contains the initiating methionine proceeding exon II and a sequences derived from human megakaryocyte colony stimulating factor (Meg-CSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a concoding the original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to primary transcript of this gene may be cleaved in different ways to the calculate in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The color of this gene may be cleaved in different ways to are also implicated in the stability, folding and processing of the synergy of MSF with other cytckines. Exons V - XII are believed to be realiting factor, it come or more of these exons may contain the calcular matrix or extracellular matrix processing. Both naturally farious comminations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, the members of the MSF family.

                       arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial hyperplasia without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSF) aces as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis. The composition may be loss of range of movement or joint damage. The present sequence workers human megakaryocyte stimulating fractor (MSF, CACP protein). Specification, although a GenBank accession number was given. This sequence was therefore obtained from GenBank (V70316).

prensics, gene mapping, lodiversity and for nutr cotein of the invention. the present invention provides the protein and coding sequences of novel coteins from a variety of organisms, including human, dog, cat, horse, w, pig, hawster, monkey, macaque, yeat, bacteria, fruit fly, sea chin and towato. These were derived from expressed sequence tags (ESTs) om the organism of interest. They can be used in diagnostics, remaics, gene mapping, identification of mutations, to assess odiversity and for nutritional purposes. The present sequence is a cc The sequence given is a full length translation from the megakaryocyte cc III and IV encodes megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). This cc sequence is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding cc tarminating codon following exon IV. The cDNA sequence given contains cc sequences derived from human megakaryocyte colony stimulating factor (MSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a cc encoding the original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to encoding the original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to tarminate in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The cc yield a family of mRNA's each encoding a different MSF protein. Exons cc yield a family of mRNA's each encoding a different MSF protein. Exons cr also implicated in the stability, folding and processing of the synergy of MSF with other cytokines. Exons V - XII are believed to be resulting factor, ie. one or more of these exons may contain the resulting factor, ie. one or more of these exons may contain of the cellular matrix or extracellular matrix processing. Both naturally cc wallous combinations of alternatively spliced exons from different cc with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different cc mathematics of the members of the MSF family.

he present invention provides the protein and coding sequences of novel coteins from a variety of organisms, including human, dog, cat, horse, w, pig, hamster, monkey, macaque, yeast, bacteria, fruit fly, sea tchin and tomato. These were derived from expressed sequence tags (ESTs) om the organism of interest. They can be used in diagnostics, yene mapping, identification of mutations, to assess ordiversity and for nutritional purposes. The present sequence is a Laim solat quence odiversity and for nutrotein of the invention. ·PSDB; ted polypeptide for treatment odies and research use -AAH98981 Page 1198-1201; 1299 ξ 1275pp; English Ģ, diseases, diagnostics, raising

The sequence given is a full length translation from the megakaryocyte contains from the megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF) precursor. The sequence covered by exons II, CC III and IV encodes megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). This color is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding cc sequence is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding cc terminating codon following exon IV. The cDNA sequence given contains cc sequences derived from human megakaryocyte colony stimulating factor (MEG-CSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a color original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to cendoing the original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to comminate in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The cc violating transcript of this gene may be cleaved in different ways to comminate in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The cc violating and implicated in the stability, folding and processing of the area also implicated in the stability, folding and processing of the cc sydergy of MSF with other cytokines. Exons V - XII are believed to be considered in the processing or folding of the appropriate structure of the resulting factor, it one or more of these exons may contain cc sequences which direct proteolytic cleavage, adhesion, organisation of the cellular matrix or extracellular matrix processing. Both naturally ccurring MSF's may be characterised by with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different xxx proteins from a variety of organisms, including human, dog, cat, horse, cdw, pig) hamster, monkey, macaque, yeast, bacteria, fruit fly, sea urchin and tomato. These were derived from expressed sequence tags (ESTs) from the organism of interest. They can be used in diagnostics, gene mapping, identification of mutations, to assess idediversity and for nutritional purposes. The present sequence is a urotein of the invention. The sequence given is a full length translation from the megakaryocyte Stimulating factor (MSF) precursor. The sequence covered by exons II, III and IV encodes megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). This CC sequence is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding CC a secretory leader, an initiating methionine proceeding exon II and a C terminating codon following exon IV. The cDNA sequence given contains CC (meg-CSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a conditing the original meg-carretion signal sequence. The sequence CC encoding the original meg-cSF includes exons II-V and is thought to terminate in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The CC yield a family of mRNA's each encoding a different ways to yield a family of mRNA's each encoding a different way by the color of the factor and molecule. These exons are also thought to play a role in the observed synergy of MSF with other cytokines. Exons V XII are believed to be the resulting factor, ie. one or more of these exons may contain of the cellular matrix or extracellular matrix processing. Both naturally variable and non-naturally occuring MSF; may be characterised by with the exons spliced together in different this sequence, with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different the secons of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different to the MSF family.

CC III and IV encodes megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF) precursor. The sequence covered by exons II, contains the incidence of the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding terminating codon following exon IV. The cDNA sequence given contains code encoding terminating codon following exon IV. The cDNA sequence given contains code encoding the original megakaryocyte colony stimulating factor codes a encoding the original megakaryocyte colony stimulating factor codes a encoding the original megakaryocyte colony stimulating factor codes a encoding the original megacyte includes exons II-IV and is thought to colony transcript of this gene may be cleaved in different ways to primary transcript of this gene may be cleaved in different ways to complete the factor and code molecule. These exons are also thought to the activity of the factor and code are also implicated in the stability, folding and processing of the code synergy of MSF with other cytokines. Exons V - XII are believed to be the resulting factor, ie. one or more of these exons may contain code code in the coding of the appropriate structure of the cellular matrix or extracellular matrix processing. Both naturally cocuring and non-naturally occuring MSF's may be characterised by well and processing of the members of the MSF family.

CC with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different to the members of the MSF family.

CC III and IV encodes megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF) precursor. The sequence covered by exons II, CC sequence is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding a secretory leader, an initiating methionine proceeding exon II and a CC terminating codon following exon IV. The CDNA sequence given contains CC (meg-CSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a CC classical mammalian protein secretion signal sequence given contains CC eriminate in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The CC primary transcript of this gene may be cleaved in different ways to CC yield family of mRNA's each encoding a different MSF protein. Exons CC v and VI are thought to be related to the activity of the factor and care also implicated in the stability, folding and processing of the cellular matrix or extracellular matrix processing. Both naturally cocuring and non-naturally occuring MSF's may be characterised by CC various combinations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, with the exons spliced together in different this sequence, with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different CC members of the MSF family.

administration of a composition comprising the camptodactyly arthropathy-
CC coxa vara-pericarditis (CACP) protein, or portions of the CACP protein.
CC The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic. The composition
CC of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous CC injection. The human CACP protein is identified in the invention as CC cacp protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 125-31, and mutations in
CC this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-
CC arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis in which patients have synovial
CC hyperplasia without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSF)
CC acts as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and CC ions of range of movement or joint damage). The present sequence CC note: This sequence is not given in its entirety in figure 4 of the CC specification, although a Genbank accession number was given. This CC sequence was therefore obtained from Genbank (U70316).
